

“You didn’t hire me. I redesigned your app anyway.”

A Hormozi-style pitch to the Zofer founder — lead with proof, not a résumé.
Talking-head for 6s, then screen-record the prototype while you keep talking. One take, energy up.

PICK YOUR HOOK — first 3 seconds decide everything

- 1 “You didn’t hire me. I redesigned your app anyway.” ← recommended
 - 2 “Your home screen is quietly killing bookings. I can prove it in 60 seconds.”
 - 3 “I found 22 UX problems in your app, fixed the top 6, and built you a working prototype. Free.”

[face to camera]

“You didn’t hire me. I redesigned your whole app anyway. Sixty seconds — here’s what I found.”

[cut to current screenshots]

“Right now your home shows two cards with no price, faceless drivers, and hides 15 services one tab away. On a service where a stranger drives your own car — that’s not friction. That’s lost bookings.”

0:22

[screen-record the prototype: Book → Choose → Rashid → Rate]

“So I reframed the whole thing. Careem assigns you a stranger. I made your app introduce you to your chauffeur — a named, rated driver you rebook every week. Watch how fast that books.”

[flash the wireframes / new-services board]

“I ran your product through a 10-lens design review — 197 checks — and built the full thing: clickable prototype, wireframes, 12 new revenue services, and a plan to measure it. It’s done. It’s yours.”

[back to face]

“If this is the direction, I’ll build the next screen live with your team this week. Reply and I’ll send you the link.”

WHY IT WORKS — the Hormozi mechanics

Move	In the script
Pattern interrupt	“You didn’t hire me” — no “Hi, my name is...”
Callout their pain, specifically	no price · faceless · 15 services buried
Name your unique mechanism (the skill)	“a 10-lens design review, 197 checks”
Show, don’t tell	the click IS the proof — keep it on screen longest
Value stack	prototype + wireframes + 12 services + metrics
One low-risk CTA	“reply and I’ll send the link” — a tiny yes

YOUR ONE-LINE POSITIONING (the skill)

“I don’t just design screens — I run a founder’s product through a 10-lens AI design council and hand back a buildable redesign in days, not months.”

Subject: I redesigned Zofer’s app (60-sec video inside)

Hey [Founder] — I’m a product designer. I used Zofer this week, saw where it’s leaking bookings, and rebuilt the core flow into a clickable prototype — before asking for anything.

60-second walkthrough: [video link]. If the direction’s right, I’ll build the next screen live with your team.

— Dharmin

Tips: keep the prototype click on screen the longest — that's the belief moment. End on the north star: "The goal — turn every ride into a repeat." Record 3 takes, ship the one with the most energy.
